THE CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS

OF

GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND

DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

PUBLISHED BY THE AUTHORITY OF HER MAJESTY'S TREASURY, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS.

On the 26th of January 1857, the Master of the Rolls submitted to the Treasury a proposal for the publication of materials for the History of this Country from the Invasion of the Romans to the reign of Henry VIII.

The Master of the Rolls suggested that these materials should be selected for publication under competent editors without reference to periodical or chronological arrangement, without mutilation or abridgment, preference being given, in the first instance, to such materials as were most scarce and valuable.

He proposed that each chronicle or historical document to be edited should be treated in the same way as if the editor were engaged on an Editio Princeps; and for this purpose the most correct text should be formed from an accurate collation of the best MSS.

To render the work more generally useful, the Master of the Rolls suggested that the editor should give an account of the MSS. employed by him, of their age and their peculiarities; that he should add to the work a brief account of the life and times of the author, and any remarks necessary to explain the chronology; but no other note or comment was to be allowed, except what might be necessary to establish the correctness of the text.

The works to be published in octavo, separately, as they were finished; the whole responsibility of the task resting upon the editors, who were to be chosen by the Master of the Rolls with the sanction of the Treasury.

The Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury, after a careful consideration of the subject, expressed their opinion in a Treasury Minute, dated February 9, 1857, that the plan recommended by the Master of the Rolls "was well calculated for the accomplishment of this important national object, in an effectual and satisfactory manner, within a reasonable time, and provided proper attention be paid to economy, in making the detailed arrangements, without unnecessary expense."

They expressed their approbation of the proposal that each Chronicle and historical document should be edited in such a manner as to represent with all possible correctness the text of each writer, derived from a collation of the best MSS., and that no notes should be added, except such as were illustrative of the various readings. They suggested, however, that the preface to each work should contain, in addition to the particulars proposed by the Master of the Rolls, a biographical account of the author, so far as authentic materials existed for that purpose, and an estimate of his historical credibility and value.

INTRODUCTION.

INTRODUCTION.

COMMENCING the fourth age of the world with the reign of David, the remainder of Higden's Second Book (cc. xxix.–xxxvi.) carries on the sacred history to the capture of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. Chapter xxix. is devoted mainly to an account of David and Solomon. Little is said of the former, save concerning his musical compositions and arrangements for the temple service. Of the latter beside what is derived from the Scriptures some Rabbinical legends are introduced, relating his early paternity, his powers as an exorcist, and his device for cleaving the stones for the building of the temple by means of a worm[1] which he discovered in a marvellous manner. The account is derived by Higden from Petrus Comestor.

Book ii.

From the same source he draws the story that the Queen of Sheba, on her visit to Solomon, observed and

[1] The MSS. of Higden agree in writing the name of the worm Thamir, though it should be Shamir. In Buxtorf's Lex. Rab. col. 2455, the legend given by Higden occurs under the word Schamir. "Scribunt "Talmudici fuisse vermiculum "instar grani hordeacei cujus virtute fissi et scissi fuerunt lapides "durissimi. Unde volunt Mosen "eo usum fuisse ad aptandos lapides "pretiosos Ephodi: Salamonem "etiam eo diffidisse lapides ad "ædificationem Templi . . . . . "Quis autem dedit eum regi Salamoni? Aquila adduxit eum ex "paradiso, sicut dictum est, 'Et "locutus est Salamon ad jumenta "et ad aves,' i. Reg. iv. 33. Quid "locutus est ad aves? Quæsivit "ex eis ubinam esset Schamir ver"miculus? Confestim avolavit "aquila et attulit eum adduxitque "ad Salamonem ex paradiso . . . ". . . Illud de aquila adducitur in "Jalkut, i. Reg. vi." Here the fetching of the worm is ascribed to the eagle, while Higden's legend has struthio, the ostrich. Bochart. Hierozoicon, vol. 2, lib. vi. cap. xi. quotes Vincentius Bellovacensis (Doctrinalis, lib. xvi. cap. 133) for the first mention of the ostrich.

pointed out the wood on which Christ was afterwards crucified, and that though Solomon strove to bury it for ever, it was afterwards found in the Probatica piscina.[1]

Higden's notices of British history in the same chapter consist of the mention of Mempricius and Ebrancus, father and son, as 5th and 6th Kings. His authorities are Geoffrey of Monmouth and Alfred of Beverley.

The account of the building of York, Edinburgh, and Alcluit, by Ebrancus, is a repetition of what he has recorded in Book I. (vol. ii., p. 64).

Isidore and Trogus are the authorities for the other contemporary events narrated in this chapter, which comprise little more than the mention of the founding
Cap. xxx. of Carthage and Ephesus. In the next chapter the abridgement of the Scripture story, beginning with Rehoboam's reign, ends with that of Joash the son of Jehoahaz King of Israel. In the MSS. there is considerable confusion between the names of Zimri and Omri. The only noteworthy departure from the facts as given in Scripture is in the history of Elisha, where it is stated, from Petrus, that on his birth in Galgala, one of the golden calves which Jeroboam had set up lowed sharply, and a priest at Jerusalem foretold that the child then born should overthrow the idol-worship of Israel.[2]

[1] The authority for this name seems to be nothing more than the mistake made by the Vulgate version in the translation of John v. 2. Joining κολυμβήθρα as a dative with ἐπὶ τῇ προβατικῇ the Latin gives, "Est autem Jerosolymis probatica "piscina," whence the name as a topographical appellation.

[2] According to the Chron. Paschale and Epiphanius, the golden calf was at Gilgal (for which Galgala is the LXX. equivalent), and its lowing was heard at Jerusalem, and not the priest, but the calf gave utterance to the words, "He shall "destroy their graven and their "molten images" (Fabricius 1071). In Higden's text in Galgalis might be taken as marking either the birthplace of the prophet or the situation of the idol. Both versions take it in the former of these senses. We have no direct information about idol-worship at Gilgal, but that it existed we may gather from Hos. iv. 15; ix. 15; xii. 11; Amos iv. 4; v. 5.

The contemporary British kings given are Brutus, called Viride Scutum, Leil, Rudibras,[1] Bladud, Leyr, to the third of whom is ascribed the building of Canterbury, Winchester, and Shaftesbury, while Bladud is mentioned as founder of Bath, and Higden expresses himself as favouring that opinion rather than the statement of William of Malmesbury that it was built by Julius Cæsar. The "Liber Britannicus" of Geoffrey is cited as authority for part of the history of Leyr.

The list of Latin kings quoted from Livy ends in this chapter with Romulus Silvius.

The chronicle of Scripture history in the next chapter begins with the reigns of Amaziah and Uzziah over Judah, and in addition to the narrative in 2 Chron. xxvii., adds, from Petrus, to the events of the reign of the latter king, that a part of a mountain was rent away and fell upon the royal gardens. Contemporary with these events is narrated the overthrow of the kingdom of Sardanapalus by Arbaces,[2] and the legislation of Lycurgus in Lacedæmon. For these the authorities are Trogus and Isidore, as is the former for the Roman history which is carried in this chapter down to the discovery of the parentage of Romulus and Remus. Following Geoffrey in the British history, Higden gives the list of monarchs from Cordelia to Molmutius, but with little story save the quarrel between Ferrex and Porrex.[3] Cap. xxxi.

[1] Called Lugdebras in the Eulogium Historiarum, chap. xxvii., where Leyr is omitted, though his daughter Cordelia is mentioned.

[2] The origin of this history of Sardanapalus cannot be traced further back than Ctesias. It is preserved in Diodorus Siculus (ii. 23–27). But his whole narrative agrees neither with Herodotus nor the Scriptures, and this account of Sardanapalus is probably as mythical as the rest. Ctesias lived no earlier than 400 B.C. Sardanapalus has been identified with the Asiatic divinity Sandon by K. O. Müller in Rheinisches Museum for 1829.

[3] The orthography of proper names in the MSS. is very variable. For Sisillius and Lago, the names given in Geoffrey's list, the Latin texts and versions all read Silvius and Iago, the latter of which names occurs in Brut Tysylio. See San Marte's edition of Geoffrey of Monmouth, p. 227.

The list of kings of Israel is brought down to Pekahiah, and in the reign of Zachariah, to make the chronology correct, the explanation is given that though that king reigned twenty-three years and a half, only the six months in which he reigned well are reckoned in the calculation of his reign.[1]

Cap. XXXII. After mentioning Jotham and Pekah, as contemporaries in Judah and Israel, the chronicler turns to notice the occurrence of the first Olympiad at this period. Professing to quote from Hugutio on the derivation of the word Olympus, the MSS. uniformly give a reading which seems utterly unintelligible. I append therefore the passage referred to.[2]

The mention of Tiglathpileser's invasion of Israel in the reign of Pekah leads to a statement quoted from John of Salisbury, who himself quotes Jerome,[3] as to the various names of that king and his successors.

Cap. XXXIII. The next chapter is chiefly occupied with Roman history and recounts, mainly on the authority of Livy and Eutropius, the history of the founding of the city, the death of Remus, and the reign and death of Romulus. The mention of the eclipse which took place at the disappearance of Romulus causes Higden to speak of Thales of Miletus as skilled in the calculation of eclipses, and this allusion prefaces an enumeration of the philosophers who succeeded Thales down to Socrates and Plato, which is followed by an account of the seven

[1] This explanation is wrongly marked in the versions as derived from Petrus. It is probably Higden's own solution of the difficulty.

[2] Under olon Hugutionis Etymologicon gives, "Item componitur "cum phos quod est lux vel ignis, "et dicitur hinc Olimpus, quidam "mons, quasi olonphus, id est, totus "lucens, qui est quasi cælum altitudine sua, unde et sæpe pro cælo "ponitur." And then follows the passage quoted on p. 50.

[3] Jerome's account assigns all the five names Salmanazar, Senecharib, Phul, Tiglath Phalazar, and Sargon to one King, but Higden prefers the authority which gives each name to a separate monarch. For an account of the results of recent investigations in Mesopotamia, whereby great light has been thrown on the relationship between these Kings, see Prof. Rawlinson's article Assyria in Smith's Dictionary of the Bible.

sages. The list of the kings of Israel is brought to an end by the mention of Hoshea's murder of Pekah.

Still following Petrus, though abridging his narrative greatly,[1] Higden relates the visit of the messengers of the king of Babylon to Hezekiah, and follows it with an account of the captivity of the ten tribes, and the settlement of the Cuthites in their place. While quoting from Petrus that the ten tribes were placed beyond the mountains of Media, beyond the river Gosan, he adds from Giraldus Cambrensis [2] the explanation that it was beyond the Caspian mountains, and mixes up with it an account of Gog and Magog, and of their delivery by Antichrist, whom the Jews believe to be the Messiah, which is not in Giraldus. After the mention that Tobit was taken captive with these ten tribes he turns to the Roman story, and, quoting Eutropius, brings it down to the reign of Numa. Cap. xxxiv.

The next chapter is occupied entirely with the affairs of the kingdom of Judah and the history of the Roman kings. In addition to the Scripture narrative, there is given, from Petrus the tradition of Isaiah's martyrdom under Manasseh by being sawn asunder with a wooden saw. In Petrus the execution is said to have taken place circa piscinas Siloe. These words, though not quoted by Higden, have led him to introduce a notice of the Hebrew tradition that the name of Siloe[3] was given to the place because of the water divinely sent into the mouth of Isaiah in answer to his prayer while suffering this martyrdom. Cap. xxxv.

[1] The words of Petrus are :— "Chaldei vigebant in astronomia, "nec poterant invenire secundum "artem suam quare dies fere in "duplum pertensa fuerat, et tandem "audierant hoc pro rege Hiero- "solymorum factum esse, et mise- "runt ad eam ut sciscitarentur rei "veritatem." iv. Reg. cap. xxxi.

[2] Descriptio Kambriæ, lib. i, cap. xvi. p. 199. This reference I could not find as the sheet was passing through the press.

[3] Siloe; this form is from the Vulgate, the better known form, Siloam, being the orthography of LXX. For an account of the probable meaning of the name, see Dr. Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, vol. iii. p. 1311.

A difference is mentioned as existing in the chronology of Amon's reign between the Hebrew Scriptures and the LXX., Higden stating that the former assigns to it two years, the latter twelve. This statement he copies from Petrus, and comments on it as helping to reconcile Scripture with profane chronology, but in the LXX. no such statement is found.[1] The same error is repeated at the end of the next chapter.

Josiah's reforms are slightly noticed, and the prophets who flourished in his days, as also the short reign of Jehoahaz, his second son; the wicked acts of Eliakim, whom Pharaoh Necho substituted for him, close the chapter. The Roman history drawn from Livy, Eutropius, and Augustine is an abstract of the reigns of Tullus Hostilius, Ancus Martius, and Tarquinius Superbus.

Cap. XXXVI. This chapter gives, on the authority of Josephus and Petrus, a digest of the events immediately preceding the downfall of Jerusalem. It opens with Nebuchadnezzar's capture of Jerusalem in the fourth year of his reign, when Jehoiakim was taken captive, but afterwards released. At the same time Daniel, Ananias, Azarias, and Misael were carried to Babylon. At this period it was that the Rechabites came to dwell in Jerusalem. The released King Jehoiakim hearing of a wish for war with Babylon on the part of Pharaoh Necho, rebelled against Nebuchadnezzar, who taking Jerusalem the second time[2] slew Jehoiakim and cast his carcase forth unburied. He then retired, having set up Jehoiachin, the son of Jehoiakim, in the place of his father, but returned in three months to Jerusalem, and on Jehoiachin's submission, spoiled the temple and the King's house, and carried away the king and 9,000 other prisoners, among whom was Mordecai. Jehoiachin remained a captive for 37 years, Zedekiah, his father's brother, being set up in his room. He, disregarding the warnings of the prophets, refused the tribute which he had promised to pay to Nebuchadnezzar, and in the eleventh year of his reign was taken prisoner by Nebuzaradan, brought to Riblah, where his eyes were put out, and thus he was conveyed blind into Babylon, fulfilling to the letter two of the prophecies at which he had scoffed. The account of this king's death from shame is derived from Petrus. With the sack of Jerusalem the book terminates, bringing to a conclusion the fourth age of the world.

[1] See 4 Reg. xxi. 19, δύο ἔτη ἐβασίλευσεν. So 2 Chronicles xxxiii. 21. There seems to be no various reading in the LXX., nor does the Vulgate give any different enumeration.

[2] Of this second attack on Jerusalem there is no notice in Scripture, nor does the account of Jehoiakim's death given in the text accord with the Bible narrative. On these discrepancies which are due to Josephus, see Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, Art. Jehoiakim.

Book iii. Cap. i.

Beginning the history of the fifth age of the world with a notice of the discrepancies between Eusebius, Josephus, and Jerome in the starting point which they severally take for reckoning the seventy years' captivity, the chronicler recounts from Petrus, the flight of the Jews into Egypt after the murder of Gedaliah. He gives also the tradition[1] of Jeremiah's subsequent murder by the Jews, and of the honours paid to him after death by the Egyptians.[2] The reason given for these honours is much like that given for the reverence paid to St. Patrick in Ireland.

The prophecy which Jeremiah gave to the kings of Egypt of the downfall of their idols when a virgin should conceive and bear a son, and likewise the account of the secreting by that prophet of the ark of the covenant and its contents are taken from Petrus. Recurring to the history of Nebuchadnezzar, Higden, from the same

[1] This tradition, found first in Tertullian (adv. Gnost. c. 8), is not in accordance with the Jewish account of the prophet's death, which tells that he escaped to Babylon, and died a natural death there. (Jarchi on Jer. xliv. 14.) Josephus does not mention his death.

[2] His bones are said to have been brought to Alexandria by Alexander the Great. Chron. Pasch. ed. Dindorf, p. 156.

source relates what he calls the ten visions[1] of Daniel, which occupy the larger part of this chapter and the two following. The tradition that Ezekiel was torn asunder between horses by the exiles of Dan and Gad completes the sacred chronicle of this chapter,[2] in which the only notice of profane history is the reign of Servius Tullius, and the manner of his death, which are taken from Eutropius.

Cap. II. On the authority of Megasthenes, quoted by Petrus, Higden gives as the immediate successor of Nebuchadnezzar, a son of the same name, who devastated Libya and Hiberia, and built hanging gardens for his wife, who was the daughter of Darius. The siege of Tyre is also ascribed to him, which is an evidence of the mythical nature of the second Nebuchadnezzar. Then follows on the throne of Babylon, Evil-merodach, the deliverer of Jehoiachin from his long imprisonment, and to whose days the events recounted in the history of Susanna are ascribed.

Cap. III. Abbreviating the history of Petrus, Higden mentions Belshazzar as the successor of Evil-merodach, but devotes most of this chapter to the last seven visions of Daniel. The vision of the four beasts introduces an account of Antichrist, who is said to be of the tribe of Dan. Remigius Jerome and Augustine are cited as authorities for such parts of the account as do not occur in Petrus.

The interpretation of the handwriting to Belshazzar brings us to a notice of Cyrus quoted from Orosius, but a more full account of him is reserved for a future chapter.

[1] He styles the deliverance of the three Hebrew children a vision of Daniel. On referring to Petrus we find an explanation of this use of the word:—"Sequitur secunda visio "Danielis, quæ ob hoc tantum visio "dicitur, quia vidit in ea rex in forma "nace quartum similem filio Dei." Hist. Lib. Dan. cap. iii.

[2] The more usual tradition ascribes his martyrdom to a Jewish ruler ὁ ἡγούμενος τοῦ λάου, called in the Roman Martyrology, "judex populi," Carpzov. Intr. ad. Libr. Bib. Vet. Test. ii. part iii. ch. v.

The only other allusion to profane history is the story cited from Trogus, of Pisistratus making himself tyrant at Athens.

The life of Cyrus is drawn from Trogus, Petrus supplying only such parts as concern Cyrus' connexion with Old Testament history. Darius the Mede is described as the uncle of Cyrus on the mother's side, and adopted son[1] of Ahasuerus or Astyages. Cap. iv.

In narrating the decree of Cyrus for the release of the Jews, Higden, as he had inserted a discussion of the date for the commencement of the captivity, so draws from Petrus an account of the various theories of the true date of its termination, Josephus and Jerome assigning the third year of Cyrus, while Eusebius puts it in the second year of Darius Hystaspis. Higden next mentions the proposal of the Samaritans to take part in the rebuilding of the temple, and the Jews' refusal of their aid. He then brings up contemporary history to this point by an account of Phalaris of Agrigentum, and of the overthrow of Crœsus, king of Lydia. The authority for these matters is Orosius. Cap. v.

This chapter is wholly occupied with the history of the expulsion of the last king of Rome. Augustine, Eutropius, and Livy supply the materials, while Higden himself raises a question of the motive of Lucretia for committing suicide. Cap. vi.

In a few lines drawn from Trogus and Petrus, we have the same account of Cyrus' death and the insult offered to his remains by Tomyris, the queen of the Scythians, as is given in Herodotus.[2] Cap. vii.

[1] This obviates the difficulty raised by Herodotus' statement, i. 109, that Astyages died without male issue, but leaves unreconciled that author's testimony, that Astyages was the last King of the Medes, i. 130. The best solution seems to be to identify Darius and Astyages, taking the former as the personal and the latter as the national name of that prince. See Niebuhr. Gesch. Ass. u. Bab., pp. 45, 92.

[2] Lib. i. c. 214.

Caps. VIII. IX. Identifying, as is most probably correct, Cambyses, with the Ahasuerus of Ezra (iv. 6) and, which is less likely, with the Nebuchadnezzar of the book of Judith, Higden states that this latter name was given him by his father,[1] and that during his father's reign he ruled the Assyrians in Nineveh. This is evidently an endeavour to account for the existence of a king reigning in Nineveh (Judith i. 1) at this date. After the death of Cambyses, the usurpation of the Pseudo-Smerdis, and its detection, and the stratagem of Darius for securing the kingdom to himself, are briefly narrated from Trogus.

Cap. X. Higden now gives the history of the rebuilding of the second temple according to the Apocrypha and Josephus, which authority Petrus followed. He tells how on the accession of Darius, Zerubbabel undertook, on the faith of a vow previously made by the king, who had long been his friend, to commence the rebuilding of the temple, but being stopped by the Persian chiefs beyond the river, he went in person to Darius, and being favourably received and proving the victor in a debate before the king, he is furnished with the royal licence for continuing the work, which was finished forty-six years after the date of the commencement of the kingdom of Persia. To this it was that the Jews referred when they said to our Lord

John ii. 20. "Forty and six years was this temple in building." All this is given in abstract from Petrus, as also the discovery of the sacred fire, which had been concealed during the captivity. Whether the Jews ever recovered the ark concealed by Jeremiah, or whether it was another like it which was carried among the trophies to Rome in the time of Titus cannot be determined.[2]

[1] Though professing to quote from Petrus, he does not give that author's reason for this name of Cambyses. The passage in Petrus is, "In historia vero Judith propter "malitiam suam vocatur Nebu- "chodonosor." On the fabulous character of the history of Judith, see article Judith, Smith's Dictionary of the Bible.

[2] We have no account of any ark carried among the trophies to Rome, and the evidence of Josephus (B. J. v. 5. 5) and of Tacitus (Hist. v. 9) goes to prove that no second ark ever was made.

The chapter ends with a notice of the appointment of Tribunes of the people at Rome.

The next chapter is devoted to the history of Pythagoras and his scientific and philosophic researches. His parentage and travels are related on the authority of Trogus. Higden then refers to John of Salisbury for an account of the influence which the philosopher obtained over the women and youth of Metapontum and its neighbourhood. The notice of his doctrines and the discipline to which his students were subjected are derived from Isidore, Valerius, and A. Gellius, while Jerome is cited on the metempsychosis. His geometrical talents are vouched for by Cicero and A. Gellius, but the greatest part of the chapter is devoted to his discoveries in music, and his application of musical sounds to allay the violent passions of his pupils. The discussion of the discovery of the relation of musical sounds given as the work of Higden himself is partly derived from Nicomachus, and is wrong so far as it relates to the tension of strings by weights of different magnitudes,[1] but where the relation of parts of the same string when stretched over a bridge is used as an illustration, the proportions are correct.[2] He ascribes to Pythagoras the discovery of the chords of the octave called Diapason; the fifth, called Diapente; the fourth, called Diatessaron; and the Tonus. Two other intervals are mentioned, the Diapason added to the Diapente, which he calls tripla proportio,[3] and the double octave styled quadrupla proportio. Cap. xi.

[1] See article Music, in Smith's Greek and Roman Antiquities.

[2] Dupla Proportio, that is, $\frac{6}{12}$ or $\frac{1}{2}$, is the relation of strings which give the interval of an octave.

Sesquialtera, i.e. as represented in the diagram, $\frac{6}{9}$ or $\frac{8}{12}=\frac{2}{3}$ would give an interval of a fifth.

Sesquitertia, i.e. $\frac{6}{8}$ or $\frac{9}{12}=\frac{3}{4}$ gives an interval of a fourth.

And the sesquioctava, i.e., $\frac{8}{9}$ is the full tone.

[3] By tripla proportio, he seems to mean the interval made by an octave and the first tetrachord of the major scale of the following octave, but none of the versions have given a translation of the Latin which describes this interval.

Cap. XII. We have in the succeeding chapter, drawn mainly from St. Augustine, a treatise on the various branches of philosophy, natural, moral, and mental, prefaced by the recital of the sources whence different schools took their names, which latter is derived from Isidore and John of Salisbury.

Caps. XIII. XIV. These two chapters, commencing with a notice of the war between the Romans and Volscians, wherein Coriolanus aided the latter against his own country, pass, after a brief notice of the death of Pisistratus and the expulsion of Hippias, to the affairs of Persia and Greece, and give briefly from Orosius, Trogus and Valerius, a digest of the events connected with the battles of Marathon and Salamis. The latter chapter (xiv.) closes with an account of the vengeance taken by Artaxerxes on Artabanus for the murder of his father Xerxes and his elder brother Darius.

Cap. XV. Drawing a notice of the commencement of the reign of Artaxerxes Longimanus from Petrus, Higden takes occasion to dissent from those who think that Esther and Mordecai lived under this prince. He places them four reigns later. After a long neglect of British history he now takes up the thread at Molmutius Dunwallo, and mentions his conquests and legislation, that his code was turned into Latin by Gildas, and into English by Alfred, and that he was buried in Trinovantum. All this is an abridgement of Geoffrey of Monmouth, lib. ii. c. 17. He then draws from Petrus an account of Ezra's return from Babylon, mentioning that he brought with him some of the ten tribes.[1]

He also ascribes to Ezra large alterations in the books of the law, stating that he repaired, corrected, and arranged anew the whole sacred literature of the

[1] Petrus relates that Ezra sent to them a copy of the letter of Artaxerxes:—"Exemplum vero [epistolæ] misit Esdras ad filios Israel "qui erant ultra montes Caspios et "venerunt de eis ad Esdram sacer- "dotes et Levitæ de Nathenneis "ccxx." Historia Libri Judith, c. v.

Hebrews,[1] and also changed their mode of writing, which before had been βουστροφηδόν to its present manner.

He closes the chapter with the mention of Empedocles and Parmenides, the philosophers, and Pherecydes the historian.

The mention of the Roman laws of the twelve tables being obtained from Athens leads to a digression on the early laws of various states and on the growth of the Roman civil law down to the time of Justinian. The downfall of the decemvirs and the re-establishment of consuls conclude the notices of Rome in the chapter. The rest is mainly occupied with an account of Nehemiah and his reforms, drawn from Petrus. He institutes a calculation here to prove that the seventy weeks of Daniel must be reckoned from the year in which Nehemiah returned to Jerusalem. Henceforth his authorities for Scripture history are Josephus Africanus and the books of the Maccabees. He closes the chapter with a short notice of Hippocrates and his works. Cap. xvi.

Barely mentioning Xerxes II., Sogdianus, and Darius Nothus, kings of Persia, he recurs to the British history of Geoffrey, from whom he abstracts the reign of Belinus, compressing it into very small compass. He then turns to the Roman history and tells of Camillus' conquest of Veii, taking the story from Livy. Cap. xvii.

Identifying Artaxerxes Mnemon with the Ahasuerus of the Book of Esther he briefly relates the fall of Vashti and the substitution of Esther in her place. He fills up the rest of the chapter with details of the life of Socrates, found in John of Salisbury, Augustine, Cicero, Valerius, and Jerome. At this period he mentions that Cap. xviii.

[1] Petrus says on this point, "Esdras Aaronita legem succensam "a Chaldeis reparavit. Nec est "mirandum si per Spiritum sanctum "libros reparavit, cum plures in die- "bus nostris psalterium et librum "hymnorum et plures libros hujus- "modi deletos scirent reparare. the Athenians began to use twenty-four letters in their alphabet instead of sixteen.[1]

Cap. xix. Treating Brennius, the brother of Belinus, the British king, as identical[2] with Brennus, the leader of the Gauls against Rome, herein following Geoffrey, he proceeds to give from Livy, Eutropius, and Trogus, a history of the descent of the Gauls into Italy. Belinus, who had accompanied his brother to that country, on his return to Britain, built Caer Usc, near the Severn, and the Porta Belini, now known as Billingsgate.

Brennus extends his wandering conquests to the East, and on his return conquers Macedonia, but is so severely injured at Delphi, where he had assaulted the temple of Apollo, that he commits suicide to free himself from his agony.

Cap. xx. The change of chief magistrates at Rome from consuls to military tribunes is now noticed, but no reason is assigned for it. The rest of chapter xx. contains a life of Diogenes the stoic. The materials are drawn from John of Salisbury, Augustine, Cicero, Jerome, Valerius, and Seneca.

Sat. x. 30. Higden, quoting from Juvenal, ascribes to Diogenes the habit which is there attributed to Heraclitus.[3]

Cap. xxi–xxix. In the last nine chapters of this volume the allusions to sacred history are confined to three: one (chap. xxii.) being that Ochus transferred some Jews into Hyrcania; another (chap. xxvi.), that Jadus was high priest in the first year of Arsanius king of Persia; and the third (chap. xxvii.), the building of the Samaritan temple on Mount Gerizim.

[1] Pliny (Hist. Nat. vii. 56) tells us that of the eight letters, added to the 16 original Phœnician characters, four were added by Palamedes at the time of the Trojan war, and four others by Simonides of Ceos.

[2] A mistake which no doubt arose from a confused knowledge of the early connection between Gaul and Britain.

[3] The words are—

de sapientibus alter
Ridebat, quoties de limine moverat unam
Protuleratque pedem: flebat contrarius auctor.

Higden has mistaken the allusion of the words "contrarius auctor." That it is to Heraclitus, see, out of many places, Sen. de ira, ii. 10.

The Roman history is comprised in allusions to the death of Camillus, the leap of Curtius, and the victories of Manlius Torquatus, and Marcus Valerius in single combats with Gallic champions (chap. xxii.–xxiii.); the Samnite war and Roman defeat at the Caudine Forks (chap. xxvi.). All these seem to be drawn from Livy, though he is only mentioned as authority for the last event. Orosius is quoted for a notice of a certain pestilence which afflicted Rome at the same period.

British affairs are noticed slightly from Geoffrey and Alfred, Gurguntius Bartruc being chronicled (chap. xxi.) as successor of Belinus, and a brief notice given of the settlement in Ireland by him of a colony of Basclenses from Spain; Guitelnus and his wife Marcia are named (chap. xxv.) as next in succession, then Sicillius, Kymarus, Danius, and Morvidus. The greatest part of these chapters is, however, occupied by notices in the form of anecdotes of the eminent characters Dionysius the younger of Syracuse, Demosthenes, Plato, Aristotle, Philip, and Alexander.

Dionysius.

In the life of Dionysius Higden only records four anecdotes, of Damon and Pythias, and of a widow who prayed for the tyrant's life, drawn from Valerius, of Damocles, and of some sayings of Dionysius, from Cicero; similarly we have anecdotes of Demosthenes from John of Salisbury, Trogus, Valerius, A. Gellius and Isidore, but it is only the last of these which gives any notion that the orator played a prominent part in the history of Greece.

Demosthenes.

Plato.

Of Plato Higden knows more, though here much of the chapter is devoted to the retailers of anecdote, mainly John of Salisbury and Valerius, while Cicero contributes the story of the bees settling on the lips of the infant philosopher. The meaning of his name is given, and an account of his studying under Socrates. After the death of his master he went to Italy to the Pythagoreans, and then to Cyrene and Egypt. Here is introduced from John of Salisbury the question whether Plato could have seen

Jeremiah in Egypt or have read his works. Chronology is made to refute the first part of the question, and the non-existence, at this time, of a Greek version of the prophet, the other. Augustine is, however, quoted to show that much of the language of Plato coincides with what is written in the beginning of St. John's Gospel, though no suggestion is made of a reason for this similarity. Plato is represented as again visiting Italy,[1] and as having intended to visit the East. His three visits to Sicily are mentioned, followed by his settling at Athens, and then from John of Salisbury is related the absurd story, told also of Homer, of his death from shame because he could not understand the reply given him by some sailors whom he met in a walk.

Speusippus is mentioned as the immediate successor of Plato, and after him Xenocrates, of whose chastity and reclamation of Polemo we have the well-known stories from Valerius.

Aristotle. For the history of the founder of the Peripatetics Higden gives Alexander de natura, i.e. Alexander Neckham, as his authority.

We are told of his birthplace, his arrival at an early age at Athens, his studies under both Socrates[2] and Plato,[3] his instruction of Alexander, his return to Athens and his death at Chalcis. But mixed up with this we have the story of his supernatural parentage [incubi dæmonis filius], of the burying of his works along with him, and the probability that Antichrist will reveal the place of their concealment.[4]

---

[1] This is the account given by Apuleius.

[2] Of course an error; Socrates died B. C. 399, Aristotle was born B.C. 384.

[3] Plato's praise of Aristotle, and the phrase, surdum est auditorium, is probably only an amplification of the expression ascribed to Plato by Philoponus (De æternitate mundi vi. 27), that Aristotle was ὁ νοῦς τῆς διατριβῆς, the intellect of the school.

[4] This strange story evidently had its origin in the account of the fate of Aristotle's works given by Strabo, Geog. xiii. p. 124. ed. Tauchnitz. There we are told that Aristotle made over his library to

Then taken from Gregory Nazianzen we have the story of his suicide by throwing himself into the Euripus in despair because he could not understand the flux and reflux of the waters there.[1]

Several works of Aristotle are mentioned by Higden, among which the tractatus de rhetorica, problemata medicinalia, physicalia, perspectiva, and the metaphysica can be identified, but of the justificationes Græcarum urbium, Homerica commenta, and Iliadis dictamen, we find no traces among his extant works. The admiration for his works expressed by Avicenna and by Maimonides[2] is known to Higden. Also that he had a son, Nicomachus, and daughter Pythias, though the latter name appears as Pitharda in the MSS. Theophrastus is mentioned as his successor, and a short notice of one of his works is given.

Philip and Alexander.

For all that is related of Philip the authorities given are Trogus and John of Salisbury, and the details concerning both him and his son are indicated in the summary of contents so fully as to render further recital here unnecessary. Higden quotes Vincentius in the first chapter on Alexander, but by far the larger portion Theophrastus, who again made it over to Neleus, who conveyed the books to Scepsis in the Troad, and his heirs,—uneducated men,—observing the pains which the kings of the Attalic dynasty were at to get books for the library at Pergamus, buried them underground in a sort of cellar, and a long time after, when they were much injured by damp and worms, they were taken up and sold to Apellicon of Teos. For a discussion of this story, see Mr. Blakesley's article on Aristotle in the Encyl. Metr.

[1] It is sufficient answer to this absurd story, to state that no such flux and reflux take place. See Blakesley as above. The story appears first in Pseudo-Justin Martyr (Parænet. ad Græcos, p. 34). The words attributed to Aristotle are from Elias Cretensis (Comment. in S. Gregorium. Orat. iv.) The name Negropont for the Euripus and for Chalcis dates as far back as this.

[2] To trace these allusions to Rabbinical literature to their source is not in place here, but would help to elucidate the question, how such learning came into Europe. There can be little doubt that the first knowledge of Aristotle came in this way. His works were translated in the Vth century into Syriac by the Nestorians, who fled into Persia, then from Syriac into Arabic and from Arabic into Latin.

of that hero's history as here given, is due to the Pseudo-Callisthenes [1] whose work forms the basis of the metrical romance of Alexander, which in Higden's day was current literature. The whole of the last chapter containing an account of Alexander's visit to the Bragmans, and his interview with one of their chief sages Dindimus,[2] is an abridgement of Pseudo-Callisthenes (lib. iii. c. 12–15).

It will be seen from this review of its contents that the present volume of Higden is occupied with details which are of little direct value to the student of history.

In it the compiler has preserved to us nothing that we do not find elsewhere, nor are there many comments of his own which tend to make this part of the chronicle more valuable. It is a selection drawn from the works to which a student in his day had access, and even the compilation is made without much discrimination. He does not scruple to give two entirely different accounts of the same event, as, for example, of the death of Aristotle, without a word to indicate that he saw anything strange in the discrepancy or had any impression in favour of one version of the story above the other.

No doubt indirectly to the student of the period at which Higden lived the book has its worth. It supplies us with the means of estimating what was probably the highest mental culture possible at that day. Meagre enough, in most cases, is the pabulum offered, yet there are not wanting tokens that something better will come. Though everything connected with Greek history is drawn of necessity from most round-about sources, yet to learn even through Maimonides and Avicenna of the philosophy of Aristotle, is one step towards arousing a desire for a more direct and reliable acquaintance therewith. Another striking feature is the acceptance as equal with Scripture of so much that had been added thereto, both by Jewish and Christian tradition, and this makes us quite prepared for the admission which Higden cites from Comestor, that the present arrangement of the Hebrew Scriptures, as well as many emendations and additions to the earlier books, were due to Ezra. It is in the same spirit of liberality that Higden is prepared to admit a question about the accuracy of the records in the first chapter of St. Matthew's gospel. Features of this kind give the work a value in relation both to the learning and literature of the period at which it was produced, while Trevisa's version has a worth altogether independent of the Latin text.

[1] This work is said to have been translated from Persian into Greek about 1070 by Simon Seth, an officer of the court of Constantinople, in the reign of Michael Ducas. See Weber's Metrical Romances, Vol. I., Introd. p. xx.

In the collation of the English texts, Professor Babington paid considerable attention in the second volume to the readings of the MS. (Cott. Tib. D. vii.) indicated by γ in the notes. Some of the forms in this MS. are extremely strange, and worthy of a special notice, and as they are used very regularly, an enumeration of them here, once for all, will save the registry of all but the most curious in the notes of future volumes.

In the personal pronouns the favourite forms for the first person singular are ych, ich, and y, and for all genders of the third person singular, as well as for the third person plural, the not unusual form is a.[1] This is most common for the masculine, and least common for the neuter of the singular. The feminine likewise appears as heo, also the neuter hyt and the plural hy.

The orthography is also peculiar : v is very frequently used instead of f[2], indicating the southern character of the MS., but there occurs an equal number of instances of the contrary interchange.[1]

There is marked preference also shown for forms with the vowel combinations eo, eu, uy, aa, ee, oo.[2]

The mark of the feminine form in nouns is as,[3] and a frequent form of the plural is on.[4]

In the words live and have, the v is always represented by bb as lybbe, habbe, and y by gg in ligge for lay, and sigge for say.

Preterites and perfect particles have unusual forms, as leop, lept, ful, fell.[5]

Now and then we find a word entirely differing from the reading in the text, and of a more antiquated character, as teer, clean; fulled, baptized; eldede, lived.

I subjoin a list of some other peculiar forms which, as well as those above noticed, are so regularly used that from them an idea may be formed of the orthography of this MS., and for the future it will not be necessary to register their occurrence.[1]

With reference to a conjecture made by Professor Babington in the Introduction to vol. ii., note, p. ix., that Cherdhole or Sherdehoole (p. 22, v. ii.) is Cheddar in Somersetshire, it is worth while to observe that Ceadboldes wigh is mentioned (Cod. Dip. 427, 1198), near Lambourne and Welford in Berkshire, and seems to approach more nearly to the name in the text.[2]

The labours of the Historical Documents Commission have brought to light two other copies of the Latin of Higden, one at Helmingham, where is also a translation

Sufferings during the siege. Capture and death of Zedekiah. Release of Jeremiah. Rechabites allowed to go free. Fall of Jerusalem, and end of the kingdom of Judah. End of the fourth age of the world. Of some confusion in the chronology. pp. 88–104.

BOOK THE THIRD.

The history of the world from the Babylonish Captivity to the birth of John the Baptist.

Cap. I.

The History of the Captivity and of Roman events contemporary therewith.

Commencement of the fifth age of the world. How the seventy years of the captivity are reckoned. Flight of the men of Judah into Egypt after Gedaliah's murder. Jeremiah goes with them unwillingly, and is stoned to death by them for his prophecies, but afterwards worshipped by the Egyptians. Reasons for this. Trevisa's digression concerning crocodiles. Jeremiah prophesies the downfall of idolatry in Egypt. He buries the ark of the covenant. The place of this burial is concealed. It shall be discovered by Moses and Aaron at Doomsday. Nebuchadnezzar conquers the Ammonites, Moabites, and Egyptians. Brings the Jews out of Egpyt. His vision of the image. Of the chronology of Nebuchadnezzar's reign. Delivery of the three Hebrew children from the fire. Nebuchadnezzar's vision of the tree. Of Nebuchadnezzar's change of form. His life after the recovery of his shape. Servius Tullius, sixth king of Rome. Includes the Quirinal, Esquiline, and Viminal hills within the walls of Rome. He appoints a census. Number of Roman citizens at this time. The wickedness of his daughter Tullia. Ezechiel rent asunder by horses. Of his visions. - - - pp. 104–116.

Cap. II.

Nebuchadnezzar the second succeeds his father. Of his might. His wondrous hanging gardens. His wife, Darius' daughter. He besieges Tyre. Marcianus omits this Nebuchadnezzar. Anaximander and Anaximenes flourish. Evilmerodach succeeds to the kingdom of Babylon. Releases Jehoiakim king of Judah, and honours him greatly. Evilmerodach's dread lest his father should come to life again. His device to prevent it. His sons. Accusation of Susanna. Why the story is not included in the canon of Scripture. - pp. 116–120.

Cap. III.

History of the Captivity, continued; and specially of Daniel's Visions.

Belshazzar, king of Babylon. Daniel's vision of the four winds, and of the ten horns. Of Antichrist. How Daniel's vision applies to him. He shall call himself Christ. He shall build the Jewish temple again; shall slay Enoch and Elijah. At last Christ shall slay him. Various opinions on this point. Of Christ's knowledge of the Judgment Day. Of Pisistratus at Athens. His answer to his wife. Daniel's fifth vision of the sheep with unequal horns, and of the goat with four horns. Explanation thereof. Daniel explains the handwriting to Belshazzar. Darius and Cyrus conquer Babylon and kill Belshazzar. Diverting of the Euphrates. Darius king of Babylon. Daniel cast to the lions. Daniel's vision of the angel Gabriel, and of the seventy weeks. Distinction between solar and lunar years. Various modes of calculating the seventy weeks. Daniel's vision of a man clad in linen, whose body was chrysolite. His vision of the kings of Persia, and of Alexander and his successors. Of the time of Daniel's death. pp. 122–136.

Cap. IV.

quamvis in Matheo et Marco xiii. dicatur quod de hora illa nullus scit nisi Pater solus, tamen Filius Dei scit, cum sit ejusdem substantiæ cum Patre. Sed pro tanto dicitur nescire, quia non facit nos scire qui sumus ejus membra, id est ecclesia, in terra. Non enim expedit diem illum scire secundum glossam Augustini, qui dicit quod dies ultimus latet ut sic omnes conserventur, et sic quotidie vivamus quasi hodie vel proxima die judicandi.[1] Trogus, libro ii°.[2] Circa hos dies apud Athenas,[3] post mortem Solonis sapientis, Pisistratus[4] quidam verberibus semetipsum cruentans,[5] hoc se passum a magistratibus amore plebis pro qua zelabat coram populo affirmavit.[6] Qua de causa datis ad custodiam ejus satellitibus pluribus, per annos xxxiii°.[7] apud Athenas regnavit.[8] Policratica, libro octavo. Hic cum uxor sua hortaretur[9] ut capitale supplicium sumeret de quodam[10] qui[11] filiam ejus[12] in via publica osculatus fuerat, respondit, "Si eos qui nos amant interficimus, "quid faciemus his[13] qui nos oderunt."

Ab urbe. dogge or a stone, and as y perceyve, hit was redy in his minde to swere by suche creatures, in that he knewe excellentely the werkes of nature, and how thei were ordeynede by the providence of God, rather þen by fals goddes ymages, and by the werkes of the labores of men whiche were worschippede that tyme in theire temples. Whereof the expositor of Boice, De Disciplina Scolarium, rehersethe in his iiij[the] chapitre. A disciple of Socrates accusede hym in that he made a boke of God, and not of goddes. Wherefore Socrates was compellede to eite an herbe pestilente in þe name of that Godde, whiche eitenge hit was not poysonede. And after that he was compellede to eite an herbe pestilente in the name of goddes, and he was dedde anoone. Whereof Tullius rehersethe that after that Socrates was putte to dethe, men of Athenes were soory, and punyschede soore his accusers, and sette an ymage of golde in the temple in the worschippe of Socrates. CALENDARS OF STATE PAPERS, &c.

[IMPERIAL 8vo., cloth. Price 15*s.* each Volume or Part.]

As far back as the year 1800, a Committee of the House of Commons recommended that Indexes and Calendars should be made to the Public Records, and thirty-six years afterwards another Committee of the House of Commons reiterated that recommendation in more forcible words; but it was not until the incorporation of the State Paper Office with the Public Record Office that the present Master of the Rolls found himself in a position to take the necessary steps for carrying out the wishes of the House of Commons.

On 7 December 1855, he stated to the Lords of the Treasury that although "the Records, State Papers, and Documents in his charge constitute the most "complete and perfect series of their kind in the civilized world," and although "they are of the greatest value in a historical and constitutional "point of view, yet they are comparatively useless to the public, from the "want of proper Calendars and Indexes."

Acting upon the recommendations of the Committees of the House of Commons above referred to, he suggested to the Lords of the Treasury that to effect the object he had in view it would be necessary for him to employ a few persons fully qualified to perform the work which he contemplated.

Their Lordships assented to the necessity of having Calendars prepared and printed, and empowered the Master of the Rolls to take such steps as might be necessary for this purpose.

The following Works have been already published under the direction of the Master of the Rolls :—

CALENDARIUM GENEALOGICUM; for the Reigns of Henry III. and Edward I. Edited by CHARLES ROBERTS, Esq., Secretary of the Public Record Office. 2 Vols. 1865.

This is a work of great value for elucidating the early history of our nobility and landed gentry.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, DOMESTIC SERIES, OF THE REIGNS OF EDWARD VI., MARY, and ELIZABETH, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by ROBERT LEMON, Esq., F.S.A. 1856–1865.

Vol. I.—1547–1580. | Vol. II.—1581–1590.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, DOMESTIC SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF ELIZABETH (continued), preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by MARY ANNE EVERETT GREEN. 1867–1870.

Vol. III.—1591–1594.
Vol. IV.—1595–1597.
Vol. V.—1598–1601.
Vol. VI.—1601–1603, with Addenda, 1547–1565.

Of the above series, six volumes are published, extending from 1547 to 1603.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, DOMESTIC SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF JAMES I., preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by MARY ANNE EVERETT GREEN. 1857–1859.

Vol. I.—1603–1610. | Vol. III.—1619–1623.
Vol. II.—1611–1618. | Vol. IV.—1623–1625, with Addenda.

Mrs. Everett Green has completed a Calendar of the Domestic State Papers of the reign of James I. in four volumes. The mass of historical matter thus rendered accessible to investigation is large and important. It throws new light on the Gunpowder-plot; the rise and fall of Somerset; the particulars connected with the Overbury murder; the disgrace of Sir Edward Coke; and other matters connected with the reign.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, DOMESTIC SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF CHARLES I., preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by JOHN BRUCE, Esq., F.S.A. 1858–1869.

Vol. I.—1625–1626. | Vol. VII.—1634–1635.
Vol. II.—1627–1628. | Vol. VIII.—1635.
Vol. III.—1628–1629. | Vol. IX.—1635–1636.
Vol. IV.—1629–1631. | Vol. X.—1636–1637.
Vol. V.—1631–1633. | Vol. XI.—1637.
Vol. VI.—1633–1634. | Vol. XII.—1637–1638.

This Calendar is in continuation of that of the Domestic State Papers of the reign of James I., and will extend to the Restoration of Charles II. It now comprises the first fourteen years of the reign of Charles I., but is in active progress towards completion, presenting notices of a large number of original documents of great value to all inquirers into the history of the period to which it relates. Many of these documents have been hitherto unknown.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, DOMESTIC SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF CHARLES II., preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by MARY ANNE EVERETT GREEN. 1860–1866.

Vol. I.—1660–1661. | Vol. V.—1665–1666.
Vol. II.—1661–1662. | Vol. VI.—1666–1667.
Vol. III.—1663–1664. | Vol. VII.—1667.
Vol. IV.—1664–1665.

Seven volumes, of the period between 1660 and 1667, have been published.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS relating to SCOTLAND, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by MARKHAM JOHN THORPE, Esq., of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford. 1858.

Vol. I., the Scottish Series, of the Reigns of Henry VIII., Edward VI., Mary, and Elizabeth, 1509–1589.

Vol. II., the Scottish Series, of the Reign of Elizabeth, 1589–1603; an Appendix to the Scottish Series, 1543–1592; and the State Papers relating to Mary Queen of Scots during her Detention in England, 1568–1587.

The two preceding volumes of State Papers relate to Scotland, and embrace the period between 1509 and 1603. In the second volume are notices of the State Papers relating to Mary Queen of Scots.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS relating to IRELAND, OF THE REIGNS OF HENRY VIII., EDWARD VI., MARY, AND ELIZABETH, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by HANS CLAUDE HAMILTON, Esq., F.S.A. 1860–1867.

Vol. I.—1509–1573. | Vol. II.—1574–1585.

The above have been published under the editorship of Mr. Hans Claude Hamilton; another volume is in the press.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, COLONIAL SERIES, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office, and elsewhere. Edited by W. NOEL SAINSBURY, Esq. 1860–1870.

Vol. I.—America and West Indies, 1574–1660.
Vol. II.—East Indies, China, and Japan, 1513–1616.
Vol. III.—East Indies, China, and Japan, 1617–1621.

These volumes include an analysis of Colonial Papers in the Public Record Office, the India Office, and the British Museum.

CALENDAR OF LETTERS AND PAPERS, FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC, OF THE REIGN OF HENRY VIII., preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office, the British Museum, &c. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1862–1870.

Vol. I.—1509–1514.
Vol. II. (in Two Parts)—1515–1518.
Vol. III. (in Two Parts)—1519–1523.
Vol. IV., Part 1.—1524–1526.

These volumes contain summaries of all State Papers and Correspondence relating to the reign of Henry VIII., in the Public Record Office, of those formerly in the State Paper Office, in the British Museum, the Libraries of Oxford and Cambridge, and other Public Libraries; and of all letters that have appeared in print in the works of Burnet, Strype, and others. Whatever authentic original material exists in England relative to the religious, political, parliamentary, or social history of the country during the reign of Henry VIII., whether despatches of ambassadors, or proceedings of the army, navy, treasury, or ordnance, or records of Parliament, appointments of officers, grants from the Crown, &c., will be found calendared in these volumes.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, FOREIGN SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF EDWARD VI., preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. 1547–1553. Edited by W. B. TURNBULL, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, and Correspondant du Comité Impérial des Travaux Historiques et des Sociétés Savantes de France. 1861.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, FOREIGN SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF MARY, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. 1553–1558. Edited by W. B. TURNBULL, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, and Correspondant du Comité Impérial des Travaux Historiques et des Sociétés Savantes de France. 1861.

The two preceding volumes exhibit the negotiations of the English ambassadors with the courts of the Emperor Charles V. of Germany, of Henry II. of France, and of Philip II. of Spain. The affairs of several of the minor continental states also find various incidental illustrations of much interest.

A valuable series of Papers descriptive of the circumstances which attended the loss of Calais merits a special notice; while the progress of the wars in the north of France, into which England was dragged by her union with Spain, is narrated at some length. The domestic affairs of England are of course passed over in these volumes, which treat only of its relations with foreign powers.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, FOREIGN SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF ELIZABETH, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office, &c. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham. 1863–1870.

Vol. I.—1558–1559.
Vol. II.—1559–1560.
Vol. III.—1560–1561.
Vol. IV.—1561–1562.
Vol. V.—1562.
Vol. VI.—1563.
Vol. VII.—1564–1565.

These volumes contain a calendar of the Foreign Correspondence of Queen Elizabeth, from her accession in 1558, of which the originals, drafts, or contemporary copies, are deposited in the Public Record Office, &c. These documents are of the greatest value as exhibiting the position of England at one of the most interesting periods of history, in regard to its relations with France, Scotland, Spain, and Germany. They are of especial importance as illustrating not only the external but also the domestic affairs of France before and during the first great war of religion under the Prince of Condé and the Duke of Guise.

CALENDAR OF TREASURY PAPERS, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by JOSEPH REDINGTON, Esq. 1868–1871.

Vol. I.—1557–1696.
Vol. II.—1697–1702.

The Papers connected with the administration of the affairs of the Treasury, from 1556–7 to 1702, comprising petitions, reports, and other documents relating to services rendered to the State, grants of money and pensions, appointments to offices, remissions of fines and duties, &c., are calendared in these volumes. They illustrate civil and military events, financial and other matters, the administration in Ireland and the Colonies, &c., and afford information nowhere else recorded.

CALENDAR OF THE CAREW PAPERS, preserved in the Lambeth Library. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London; and WILLIAM BULLEN, Esq. 1867–1870.

Vol. I.—1515–1574.
Vol. II.—1575–1588.
Vol. III.—1589–1600.
Vol. IV.—1601–1603.

The Carew Papers relating to Ireland deposited in the Lambeth Library are not only unique in themselves, but are of great importance. Four volumes of the Calendar of these valuable Papers have been published, extending from 1515 to 1603, which cannot fail to be welcome to all students of Irish history. Another volume is in the press.

CALENDAR OF LETTERS, DESPATCHES, AND STATE PAPERS, relating to the Negotiations between England and Spain, preserved in the Archives at Simancas, and elsewhere. Edited by G. A. BERGENROTH. 1862–1868.

Vol. I.—Hen. VII.—1485–1509.
Vol. II.—Hen. VIII.—1509–1525.
Supplement to Vol. I. and Vol. II.

Mr. Bergenroth was engaged in compiling a Calendar of the Papers relating to England preserved in the archives of Simancas in Spain, and the corresponding portion removed from Simancas to Paris. Mr. Bergenroth also visited Madrid, and examined the Papers there, bearing on the reign of Henry VIII. The first volume contains the Spanish Papers of the reign of Henry VII.; the second volume, those of the first portion of the reign of Henry VIII. The Supplement contains new information relating to the private life of Queen Katharine of England; and to the projected marriage of Henry VII. with Queen Juana, widow of King Philip of Castile, and mother of the Emperor Charles V.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS AND MANUSCRIPTS, relating to ENGLISH AFFAIRS, preserved in the Archives of Venice, &c. Edited by RAWDON BROWN, Esq. 1864–1869.

Vol. I.—1202–1509.
Vol. II.—1509–1519.
Vol. III.—1520–1526.

Of the Papers in the Venetian archives, Mr. Rawdon Brown has published three volumes of his Calendar, extending from 1202 to 1526, and has made considerable progress in the fourth volume. Mr. Brown's researches have brought to light a number of important documents relating to the various periods of English history, and his contributions to historical literature are of the most interesting and important character.

REPORT OF THE DEPUTY KEEPER OF THE PUBLIC RECORDS AND THE REV. J. S. BREWER TO THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS, upon the Carte and Carew Papers in the Bodleian and Lambeth Libraries. 1864. Price 2*s.* 6*d.*

THE CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

[Royal 8vo., half-bound. Price 10*s.* each Volume or Part.]

On 25 July 1822, the House of Commons presented an address to the Crown, stating that the editions of the works of our ancient historians were inconvenient and defective; that many of their writings still remained in manuscript, and, in some cases, in a single copy only. They added, "that an "uniform and convenient edition of the whole, published under His Majesty's "royal sanction, would be an undertaking honourable to His Majesty's reign, "and conducive to the advancement of historical and constitutional know- "ledge; that the House therefore humbly besought His Majesty, that He "would be graciously pleased to give such directions as His Majesty, in His "wisdom, might think fit, for the publication of a complete edition of the "ancient historians of this realm, and assured His Majesty that whatever "expense might be necessary for this purpose would be made good."

The Master of the Rolls, being very desirous that effect should be given to the resolution of the House of Commons, submitted to Her Majesty's Treasury in 1857 a plan for the publication of the ancient chronicles and memorials of the United Kingdom, and it was adopted accordingly. In selecting these works, it was considered right, in the first instance, to give preference to those of which the manuscripts were unique, or the materials of which would help to fill up blanks in English history for which no satisfactory and authentic information hitherto existed in any accessible form. One great object the Master of the Rolls had in view was to form a corpus historicum within reasonable limits, and which should be as complete as possible. In a subject of so vast a range, it was important that the historical student should be able to select such volumes as conformed with his own peculiar tastes and studies, and not be put to the expense of purchasing the whole collection; an inconvenience inseparable from any other plan than that which has been in this instance adopted.

Of the Chronicles and Memorials, the following volumes have been published. They embrace the period from the earliest time of British history down to the end of the reign of Henry VII.

1. The Chronicle of England, by John Capgrave. Edited by the Rev. F. C. Hingeston, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

   Capgrave was prior of Lynn, in Norfolk, and provincial of the order of the Friars Hermits of England shortly before the year 1464. His Chronicle extends from the creation of the world to the year 1417. As a record of the language spoken in Norfolk (being written in English), it is of considerable value.

2. Chronicon Monasterii de Abingdon. Vols. I. and II. Edited by the Rev. Joseph Stevenson, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1858.

   This Chronicle traces the history of the great Benedictine monastery of Abingdon in Berkshire, from its foundation by King Ina of Wessex, to the reign of Richard I., shortly after which period the present narrative was drawn up by an inmate of the establishment. The author had access to the title-deeds of the house ; and incorporates into his history various charters of the Saxon kings, of great importance as illustrating not only the history of the locality but that of the kingdom. The work is printed for the first time.

3. Lives of Edward the Confessor. I.—La Estoire de Seint Aedward le Rei. II.—Vita Beati Edvardi Regis et Confessoris. III.—Vita Æduuardi Regis qui apud Westmonasterium requiescit. Edited by Henry Richards Luard, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1858.

   The first is a poem in Norman French, containing 4,686 lines, addressed to Alianor, Queen of Henry III., and probably written in the year 1245, on the occasion of the restoration of the church of Westminster. Nothing is known of the author. The second is an anonymous poem, containing 536 lines, written between the years 1440 and 1450, by command of Henry VI., to whom it is dedicated. It does not throw any new light on the reign of Edward the Confessor, but is valuable as a specimen of the Latin poetry of the time. The third, also by an anonymous author, was apparently written for Queen Edith, between the years 1066 and 1074, during the pressure of the suffering brought on the Saxons by the Norman conquest. It notices many facts not found in other writers, and some which differ considerably from the usual accounts.

4. Monumenta Franciscana ; scilicet, I.—Thomas de Eccleston de Adventu Fratrum Minorum in Angliam. II.—Adæ de Marisco Epistolæ. III.—Registrum Fratrum Minorum Londoniæ. Edited by J. S. Brewer, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1858.

   This volume contains original materials for the history of the settlement of the order of Saint Francis in England, the letters of Adam de Marisco, and other papers connected with the foundation and diffusion of this great body. It has been the aim of the editor to collect whatever historical information could be found in this country, towards illustrating a period of the national history for which only scanty materials exist. None of these have been before printed.

5. Fasciculi Zizaniorum Magistri Johannis Wyclif cum Tritico. Ascribed to Thomas Netter, of Walden, Provincial of the Carmelite Order in England, and Confessor to King Henry the Fifth. Edited by the Rev. W. W. Shirley, M.A., Tutor and late Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford. 1858.

   This work derives its principal value from being the only contemporaneous account of the rise of the Lollards. When written, the disputes of the school-men had been extended to the field of theology, and they appear both in the writings of Wycliff and in those of his adversaries. Wycliff's little bundles of tares are not less metaphysical than theological, and the conflict between Nominalists and Realists rages side by side with the conflict between the different interpreters of Scripture. The work gives a good idea of the controversies at the end of the 14th and the beginning of the 15th centuries.

6. The Buik of the Croniclis of Scotland ; or, A Metrical Version of the History of Hector Boece ; by William Stewart. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. B. Turnbull, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. 1858.

This is a metrical translation of a Latin Prose Chronicle, and was written in the first half of the 16th century. The narrative begins with the earliest legends, and ends with the death of James I. of Scotland, and the "evil ending of the traitors that slew him." Strict accuracy of statement is not to be looked for in such a work as this ; but the stories of the colonization of Spain, Ireland, and Scotland are interesting if not true ; and the chronicle is valuable as a reflection of the manners, sentiments, and character of the age in which it was composed. The peculiarities of the Scottish dialect are well illustrated in this metrical version, and the student of language will find ample materials for comparison with the English dialects of the same period, and with modern lowland Scotch.

7. Johannis Capgrave Liber de Illustribus Henricis. Edited by the Rev. F. C. Hingeston, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

This work is dedicated to Henry VI. of England, who appears to have been, in the author's estimation, the greatest of all the Henries. It is divided into three distinct parts, each having its own separate dedication. The first part relates only to the history of the Empire, and extends from the election of Henry I., the Fowler, to the end of the reign of the Emperor Henry VI. The second part is devoted to English history, and extends from the accession of Henry I. in the year 1100, to the year 1446, which was the twenty-fourth year of the reign of King Henry VI. The third part contains the lives of illustrious men who have borne the name of Henry in various parts of the world.

Capgrave was born in 1393, in the reign of Richard II., and lived during the Wars of the Roses, for the history of which period his work is of some value.

8. Historia Monasterii S. Augustini Cantuariensis, by Thomas of Elmham, formerly Monk and Treasurer of that Foundation. Edited by Charles Hardwick, M.A., Fellow of St. Catharine's Hall, and Christian Advocate in the University of Cambridge. 1858.

This history extends from the arrival of St. Augustine in Kent until 1191. Prefixed is a chronology as far as 1418, which shows in outline what was to have been the character of the work when completed. The only copy known is in the possession of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The author was connected with Norfolk, and most probably with Elmham, whence he derived his name.

9. Eulogium (Historiarum sive Temporis) : Chronicon ab Orbe condito usque ad Annum Domini 1366 ; a Monacho quodam Malmesbiriensi exaratum. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by F. S. Haydon, Esq., B.A. 1858–1863.

This is a Latin Chronicle extending from the Creation to the latter part of the reign of Edward III., and written by a monk of the Abbey of Malmesbury, in Wiltshire, about the year 1367. A continuation, carrying the history of England down to the year 1413, was added in the former half of the fifteenth century by an author whose name is not known. The original Chronicle is divided into five books, and contains a history of the world generally, but more especially of England to the year 1366. The continuation extends the history down to the coronation of Henry V. The Eulogium itself is chiefly valuable as containing a history, by a contemporary, of the period between 1356 and 1366. The notices of events appear to have been written very soon after their occurrence. Among other interesting matter, the Chronicle contains a diary of the Poitiers campaign, evidently furnished by some person who accompanied the army of the Black Prince. The continuation of the Chronicle is also the work of a contemporary, and gives a very interesting account of the reigns of Richard II. and Henry IV. It is believed to be the earliest authority for the statement that the latter monarch died in the Jerusalem Chamber at Westminster.

10. Memorials of Henry the Seventh: Bernardi Andreæ Tholosatis Vita Regis Henrici Septimi; necnon alia quædam ad eundem Regem spectantia. Edited by James Gairdner, Esq. 1858.

The contents of these volumes are—(1) a life of Henry VII., by his poet laureate and historiographer, Bernard André, of Toulouse, with some compositions in verse, of which he is supposed to have been the author; (2) the journals of Roger Machado during certain embassies on which he was sent by Henry VII. to Spain and Brittany, the first of which had reference to the marriage of the King's son, Arthur, with Catharine of Arragon; (3) two curious reports by envoys sent to Spain in the year 1505 touching the succession to the Crown of Castile, and a project of marriage between Henry VII. and the Queen of Naples; and (4) an account of Philip of Castile's reception in England in 1506. Other documents of interest in connexion with the period are given in an appendix.

11. Memorials of Henry the Fifth. I.—Vita Henrici Quinti, Roberto Redmanno auctore. II.—Versus Rhythmici in laudem Regis Henrici Quinti. III.—Elmhami Liber Metricus de Henrico V. Edited by Charles A. Cole, Esq. 1858.

This volume contains three treatises which more or less illustrate the history of the reign of Henry V., viz.: A Life by Robert Redman; a Metrical Chronicle by Thomas Elmham, prior of Lenton, a contemporary author; Versus Rhythmici, written apparently by a monk of Westminster Abbey, who was also a contemporary of Henry V. These works are printed for the first time.

12. Munimenta Gildhallæ Londoniensis; Liber Albus, Liber Custumarum, et Liber Horn, in archivis Gildhallæ asservati. Vol. I., Liber Albus. Vol. II. (in Two Parts), Liber Custumarum. Vol. III., Translation of the Anglo-Norman Passages in Liber Albus, Glossaries, Appendices, and Index. Edited by Henry Thomas Riley, Esq., M.A., Barrister-at-Law. 1859–1862.

The manuscript of the Liber Albus, compiled by John Carpenter, Common Clerk of the City of London in the year 1419, a large folio volume, is preserved in the Record Room of the City of London. It gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of that City in the twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and early part of the fifteenth centuries.

The Liber Custumarum was compiled probably by various hands in the early part of the fourteenth century during the reign of Edward II. The manuscript, a folio volume, is also preserved in the Record Room of the City of London, though some portion in its original state, borrowed from the City in the reign of Queen Elizabeth and never returned, forms part of the Cottonian MS. Claudius D. II. in the British Museum. It also gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of the City of London in the twelfth, thirteenth, and early part of the fourteenth centuries.

13. Chronica Johannis de Oxenedes. Edited by Sir Henry Ellis, K.H. 1859.

Although this Chronicle tells of the arrival of Hengist and Horsa in England in the year 449, yet it substantially begins with the reign of King Alfred, and comes down to the year 1292, where it ends abruptly. The history is particularly valuable for notices of events in the eastern portions of the kingdom, which are not to be elsewhere obtained, and some curious facts are mentioned relative to the floods in that part of England, which are confirmed in the Friesland Chronicle of Anthony Heinrich, pastor of the Island of Mohr.

14. A Collection of Political Poems and Songs relating to English History, from the Accession of Edward III. to the Reign of Henry VIII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by Thomas Wright, Esq., M.A. 1859–1861.

These Poems are perhaps the most interesting of all the historical writings of the period, though they cannot be relied on for accuracy of statement. They are various in character; some are upon religious subjects, some may be called satires, and some give no more than a court scandal; but as a whole they present a very fair picture of society, and of the relations of the different classes to one another. The period comprised is in itself interesting, and brings us, through the decline of the feudal system, to the beginning of our modern history. The songs in old English are of considerable value to the philologist.

15. The "Opus Tertium," "Opus Minus," &c., of Roger Bacon. Edited by J. S. Brewer, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1859.

This is the celebrated treatise—never before printed—so frequently referred to by the great philosopher in his works. It contains the fullest details we possess of the life and labours of Roger Bacon: also a fragment by the same author, supposed to be unique, the "Compendium Studii Theologiæ."

16. Bartholomæi de Cotton, Monachi Norwicensis, Historia Anglicana; 449–1298: necnon ejusdem Liber de Archiepiscopis et Episcopis Angliæ. Edited by Henry Richards Luard, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1859.

The author, a monk of Norwich, has here given us a Chronicle of England from the arrival of the Saxons in 449 to the year 1298, in or about which year it appears that he died. The latter portion of this history (the whole of the reign of Edward I. more especially) is of great value, as the writer was contemporary with the events which he records. An Appendix contains several illustrative documents connected with the previous narrative.

17. Brut y Tywysogion; or, The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales. Edited by the Rev. John Williams ab Ithel, M.A. 1860.

This work, also known as "The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales," has been attributed to Caradoc of Llancarvan, who flourished about the middle of the twelfth century. It is written in the ancient Welsh language, begins with the abdication and death of Caedwala at Rome, in the year 681, and continues the history down to the subjugation of Wales by Edward I., about the year 1282.

18. A Collection of Royal and Historical Letters during the Reign of Henry IV. 1399–1404. Edited by the Rev. F. C. Hingeston, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1860.

This volume, like all the others in the series containing a miscellaneous selection of letters, is valuable on account of the light it throws upon biographical history, and the familiar view it presents of characters, manners, and events. The period requires much elucidation; to which it will materially contribute.

19. The Repressor of over much Blaming of the Clergy. By Reginald Pecock, sometime Bishop of Chichester. Vols. I. and II. Edited by Churchill Babington, B.D., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1860.

The "Repressor" may be considered the earliest piece of good theological disquisition of which our English prose literature can boast. The author was born about the end of the fourteenth century, consecrated Bishop of St. Asaph in the year 1444, and translated to the see of Chichester in 1450. While Bishop of St. Asaph, he zealously defended his brother prelates from the attacks of those who censured the bishops for their neglect of duty. He maintained that it was no part of a bishop's functions to appear in the pulpit, and that his time might be more profitably spent, and his dignity better maintained, in the performance of works of a higher character. Among those who thought differently were the Lollards, and against their general doctrines the "Repressor" is directed. Pecock took up a position midway between that of the Roman Church and that of the modern Anglican Church; but his work is interesting chiefly because it gives a full account of the views of the Lollards and of the arguments by which they were supported, and because it assists us to ascertain the state of feeling which ultimately led to the Reformation. Apart from religious matters, the light thrown upon contemporaneous history is very small, but the "Repressor" has great value for the philologist, as it tells us what were the characteristics of the language in use among the cultivated Englishmen of the fifteenth century. Pecock, though an opponent of the Lollards, showed a certain spirit of toleration, for which he received, towards the end of his life, the usual mediæval reward—persecution.

20. Annales Cambriæ. Edited by the Rev. John Williams ab Ithel, M.A. 1860.

These annals, which are in Latin, commence in the year 447, and come down to the year 1288. The earlier portion appears to be taken from an Irish Chronicle, which was also used by Tigernach, and by the compiler of the Annals of Ulster. During its first century it contains scarcely anything relating to Britain, the earliest direct concurrence with English history is relative to the mission of Augustine. Its notices throughout though brief, are valuable. The annals were probably written at St. Davids, by Blegewryd, Archdeacon of Llandaff, the most learned man in his day in all Cymru.

21. The Works of Giraldus Cambrensis. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by J. S. Brewer, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. Vols. V. and VI. Edited by the Rev. James F. Dimock, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1861–1868.

The first three volumes contain the historical works of Gerald du Barry, who lived in the reigns of Henry II., Richard I., and John, and attempted to re-establish the independence of Wales by restoring the see of St. Davids to its ancient primacy. His works are of a very miscellaneous nature, both in prose and verse, and are remarkable chiefly for the racy and original anecdotes which they contain relating to contemporaries. He is the only Welsh writer of any importance who has contributed so much to the mediæval literature of this country, or assumed, in consequence of his nationality, so free and independent a tone. His frequent travels in Italy, in France, in Ireland, and in Wales, gave him opportunities for observation which did not generally fall to the lot of mediæval writers in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and of these observations Giraldus has made due use. Only extracts from these treatises have been printed before, and almost all of them are taken from unique manuscripts.

The Topographia Hibernica (in Vol. V.) is the result of Giraldus' two visits to Ireland. The first in the year 1183, the second in 1185–6, when he accompanied Prince John into that country. Curious as this treatise is, Mr. Dimock is of opinion that it ought not to be accepted as sober truthful history, for Giraldus himself states that truth was not his main object, and that he compiled the work for the purpose of sounding the praises of Henry the Second. Elsewhere, however, he declares that he had stated nothing in the Topographia of the truth of which he was not well assured, either by his own eyesight or by the testimony, with all diligence elicited, of the most trustworthy and authentic men in the country; that though he did not put just the same full faith in their reports as in what he had himself seen, yet, as they only related what they had themselves seen, he could not but believe such credible witnesses. A very interesting portion of this treatise is devoted to the animals of Ireland. It shows that he was a very accurate and acute observer, and his descriptions are given in a way that a scientific naturalist of the present day could hardly improve upon. The Expugnatio Hibernica was written about the year 1188, and may be regarded rather as a great epic than a sober relation of acts occurring in his own days. No one can peruse it without coming to the conclusion that it is rather a poetical fiction than a prosaic truthful history.

Vol. VI. contains the Itinerarium Kambriæ et Descriptio Kambriæ.

22. Letters and Papers illustrative of the Wars of the English in France during the Reign of Henry the Sixth, King of England. Vol. I., and Vol. II. (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. Joseph Stevenson, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1861–1864.

The letters and papers contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from originals or contemporary copies extant in the Bibliothèque Impérial, and the Depôt des Archives, in Paris. They illustrate the line of policy adopted by John Duke of Bedford and his successors during their government of Normandy, and such other provinces of France as had been acquired by Henry V. We may here trace, step by step, the gradual declension of the English power, until we are prepared to read of its final overthrow.

23. The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, according to the several Original Authorities. Vol. I., Original Texts. Vol. II., Translation. Edited and translated by Benjamin Thorpe, Esq., Member of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Munich, and of the Society of Netherlandish Literature at Leyden. 1861.

This Chronicle, extending from the earliest history of Britain to the year 1154, is justly the boast of England; for no other nation can produce any history, written in its own vernacular, at all approaching it, either in antiquity, truthfulness, or extent, the historical books of the Bible alone excepted. There are at present six independent manuscripts of the Saxon Chronicle, ending in different years, and written in different parts of the country. In this edition, the text of each manuscript is printed in columns on the same page, so that the student may see at a glance the various changes which occur in orthography, whether arising from locality or age.

24. Letters and Papers illustrative of the Reigns of Richard III. and Henry VII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by James Gairdner, Esq. 1861–1863.

The Papers are derived from MSS. in the Public Record Office, the British Museum, and other repositories. The period to which they refer is unusually destitute of chronicles and other sources of historical information, so that the light obtained from these documents is of special importance. The principal contents of the volumes are some diplomatic Papers of Richard III.; correspondence between Henry VII. and Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain; documents relating to Edmund de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk; and a portion of the correspondence of James IV. of Scotland.

25. Letters of Bishop Grosseteste, illustrative of the Social Condition of his Time. Edited by Henry Richards Luard, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1861.

The Letters of Robert Grosseteste (131 in number) are here collected from various sources, and a large portion of them is printed for the first time. They range in date from about 1210 to 1253, and relate to various matters connected not only with the political history of England during the reign of Henry III., but with its ecclesiastical condition. They refer especially to the diocese of Lincoln, of which Grosseteste was bishop.

26. Descriptive Catalogue of Manuscripts relating to the History of Great Britain and Ireland. Vol. I. (in Two Parts); Anterior to the Norman Invasion. Vol. II.; 1066–1200. Vol. III.; 1200–1327. By Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy, D.C.L., Deputy Keeper of the Public Records. 1862–1871.

The object of this work is to publish notices of all known sources of British history, both printed and unprinted, in one continued sequence. The materials, when historical (as distinguished from biographical), are arranged under the year in which the latest event is recorded in the chronicle or history, and not under the period in which its author, real or supposed, flourished. Biographies are enumerated under the year in which the person commemorated died, and not under the year in which the life was written. This arrangement has two advantages; the materials for any given period may be seen at a glance; and if the reader knows the time when an author wrote, and the number of years that had elapsed between the date of the events and the time the writer flourished, he will generally be enabled to form a fair estimate of the comparative value of the narrative itself. A brief analysis of each work has been added when deserving it, in which the original portions are distinguished from those which are mere compilations. When possible, the sources are indicated, from which such compilations have been derived. A biographical sketch of the author of each piece has been added, and a brief notice has also been given of such British authors as have written on historical subjects.

27. Royal and other Historical Letters illustrative of the Reign of Henry III. Vol. I., 1216–1235. Vol. II., 1236–1272. Selected and edited by the Rev. W. W. Shirley, D.D., Regius Professor in Ecclesiastical History, and Canon of Christ Church, Oxford. 1862–1866.

The letters contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from the ancient correspondence formerly in the Tower of London, and now in the Public Record Office. They illustrate the political history of England during the growth of its liberties, and throw considerable light upon the personal history of Simon de Montfort. The affairs of France form the subject of many of them, especially in regard to the province of Gascony. The entire collection consists of nearly 700 documents, the greater portion of which is printed for the first time.

28. Chronica Monasterii S. Albani.—1. Thomæ Walsingham Historia Anglicana; Vol. I., 1272–1381: Vol. II., 1381–1422. 2. Willelmi Rishanger Chronica et Annales, 1259–1307. 3. Johannis de Trokelowe et Henrici de Blaneforde Chronica et Annales, 1259–1296; 1307–1324; 1392–1406. 4. Gesta Abbatum Monasterii S. Albani, a Thoma Walsingham, regnante Ricardo Secundo, ejusdem Ecclesiæ Præcentore, compilata; Vol. I., 793–1290: Vol. II., 1290–1349: Vol. III., 1349–1411. 5. Johannis Amundesham, Monachi Monasterii S. Albani, ut videtur, Annales; Vol. I. Edited by Henry Thomas Riley, Esq., M.A., of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; and of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863–1870.

In the first two volumes is a history of England, from the death of Henry III. to the death of Henry V., written by Thomas Walsingham, precentor of St. Albans and prior of the cell of Wymundham, belonging to that abbey. Walsingham's work is printed from MS. VII. in the Arundel Collection in the College of Arms, London, a manuscript of the fifteenth century, collated with MS. 13 E. IX. in the King's Library in the British Museum, and MS. VII. in the Parker Collection of Manuscripts at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

In the third volume is a Chronicle of English History, from 1259 to 1306, attributed to William Rishanger, monk of Saint Albans, who lived in the reign of Edward I., printed from the Cottonian Manuscript, Faustina B. IX. (of the fourteenth century) in the British Museum, collated with MS. 14 C. VII. (fols. 219–231) in the King's Library, British Museum, and the Cottonian Manuscript Claudius E. III., fols. 306–331: Also an account of transactions attending the award of the kingdom of Scotland to John Balliol by King Edward I., 1291–1292, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI., attributed to William Rishanger above mentioned, but on no sufficient ground: A short Chronicle of English History, from 1292 to 1300, by an unknown hand, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A short Chronicle from 1297 to 1307, Willelmi Rishanger Gesta Edwardi Primi Regis Angliæ, from MS. 14 C. I. in the Royal Library, and MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI., with an addition of Annales Regum Angliæ, probably by the same hand: A fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1299, 1300, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1295 to 1300, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: and a fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1285 to 1307, from MS. 14 C. I. in the Royal Library.

In the fourth volume is a Chronicle of English History, by an anonymous writer, 1259 to 1296, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: Annals of King Edward II., 1307 to 1323, by John de Trokelowe, a monk of St. Albans from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A continuation of Trokelowe's Annals, 1323, 1324, by Henricus de Blaneforde, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A full Chronicle of English History, by an anonymous writer of St. Albans, 1392 to 1406, from MS. VII. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; and an account of the benefactors of St. Albans, written in the early part of the fifteenth century, from MS. VI. in the same Library.

The fifth, sixth, and seventh volumes (which form an entirely separate work), contain a history of the Abbots of St. Albans, and of the fortunes and vicissitudes of the house, from 793 to 1411, mainly compiled by Thomas Walsingham, Præcentor of the Abbey in the reign of Richard II., and transcribed from MS. Cotton. Claudius E. IV., in the British Museum; with a brief Continuation of the History, extracted from the closing pages of the Parker MS. No. VII., in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

The eighth volume is in continuation of the Annals, containing a Chronicle supposed to have been written by John Amundesham, a monk of that monastery.

29. Chronicon Abbatiæ Eveshamensis, Auctoribus Dominico Priore Eveshamiæ et Thoma de Marleberge Abbate, a Fundatione ad Annum 1213, una cum Continuatione ad Annum 1418. Edited by the Rev. W. D. Macray, M.A., Bodleian Library, Oxford. 1863.

The Chronicle of Evesham illustrates the history of that important monastery from its foundation by Egwin, about 690, to the year 1418. Its chief feature is an autobiography, which makes us acquainted with the inner daily life of a great abbey, such as but rarely has been recorded. Interspersed are many notices of general, personal, and local history which will be read with much interest. This work exists in a single MS., and is for the first time printed.

30. Ricardi de Cirencestria Speculum Historiale de Gestis Regum Angliæ. Vol. I., 447–871. Vol. II., 872–1066. Edited by John E. B. Mayor, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1863–1869.

The compiler, Richard of Cirencester, was a monk of Westminster, 1355–1400. In 1391 he obtained a licence to make a pilgrimage to Rome. His history, in four books, extends from 447 to 1066. He announces his intention of continuing it, but there is no evidence that he completed any more. This chronicle gives many charters in favour of Westminster Abbey, and a very full account of the lives and miracles of the saints, especially of Edward the Confessor, whose reign occupies the fourth book. A treatise on the Coronation, by William of Sudbury, a monk of Westminster, fills book iii. c. 3. It was on this author that C. J. Bertram fathered his forgery, De Situ Brittaniæ, in 1747.

31. Year Books of the Reign of Edward the First. Years 20–21, 30–31, and 32–33. Edited and translated by Alfred John Horwood, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863–1866.

The volumes known as the "Year Books" contain reports in Norman-French of cases argued and decided in the Courts of Common Law. They may be considered to a great extent as the "lex non scripta" of England, and have been held in the highest veneration by the ancient sages of the law, and were received by them as the repositories of the first recorded judgments and dicta of the great legal luminaries of past ages. They are also worthy of the attention of the general reader on account of the historical information and the notices of public and private persons which they contain, as well as the light which they throw on ancient manners and customs.

32. Narratives of the Expulsion of the English from Normandy; 1449–1450.—Robertus Blondelli de Reductione Normanniæ: Le Recouvrement de Normendie, par Berry, Hérault du Roy: Conferences between the Ambassadors of France and England. Edited, from MSS. in the Imperial Library at Paris, by the Rev. Joseph Stevenson, M.A., of University College, Durham. 1863.

This volume contains the narrative of an eye-witness who details with considerable power and minuteness the circumstances which attended the final expulsion of the English from Normandy in the year 1450. The history commences with the infringement of the truce by the capture of Fougères, and ends with the battle of Formigny and the embarkation of the Duke of Somerset. The whole period embraced is less than two years.

33. Historia et Cartularium Monasterii S. Petri Gloucestriæ. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. H. Hart, Esq., F.S.A., Membre correspondant de la Société des Antiquaires de Normandie. 1863–1867.

This work consists of two parts, the History and the Cartulary of the Monastery of St. Peter, Gloucester. The history furnishes an account of the monastery from its foundation, in the year 681, to the early part of the reign of Richard II., together with a calendar of donations and benefactions. It treats principally of the affairs of the monastery, but occasionally matters of general history are introduced. Its authorship has generally been assigned to Walter Froucester, the twentieth abbot, but without any foundation.

34. Alexandri Neckam de Naturis Rerum libri duo; with Neckam's Poem, De Laudibus Divinæ Sapientiæ. Edited by Thomas Wright, Esq., M.A. 1863.

Neckam was a man who devoted himself to science, such as it was in the twelfth century. In the "De Naturis Rerum" are to be found what may be called the rudiments of many sciences mixed up with much error and ignorance. Neckam was not thought infallible, even by his contemporaries, for Roger Bacon remarks of him, "this Alexander in many things wrote what was true and useful; "but he neither can nor ought by just title to be reckoned among authorities." Neckam, however, had sufficient independence of thought to differ from some of the schoolmen who in his time considered themselves the only judges of literature. He had his own views in morals, and in giving us a glimpse of them, as well as of his other opinions, he throws much light upon the manners, customs, and general tone of thought prevalent in the twelfth century. The poem entitled "De Laudibus Divinæ Sapientiæ" appears to be a metrical paraphrase or abridgment of the "De Naturis Rerum." It is written in the elegiac metre; and though there are many lines which violate classical rules, it is, as a whole, above the ordinary standard of mediæval Latin.

35. Leechdoms, Wortcunning, and Starcraft of Early England; being a Collection of Documents illustrating the History of Science in this Country before the Norman Conquest. Vols. I., II., and III. Collected and edited by the Rev. T. Oswald Cockayne, M.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1864–1866.

This work illustrates not only the history of science, but the history of superstition. In addition to the information bearing directly upon the medical skill and medical faith of the times, there are many passages which incidentally throw light upon the general mode of life and ordinary diet. The volumes are interesting not only in their scientific, but also in their social aspect. The manuscripts from which they have been printed are valuable to the Anglo-Saxon scholar for the illustrations they afford of Anglo-Saxon orthography.

36. Annales Monastici. Vol. I.:—Annales de Margan, 1066–1232; Annales de Theokesberia, 1066–1263; Annales de Burton, 1004–1263. Vol. II.:—Annales Monasterii de Wintonia, 519–1277; Annales Monasterii de Waverleia, 1–1291. Vol. III.:—Annales Prioratus de Dunstaplia, 1–1297; Annales Monasterii de Bermundeseia, 1042–1432. Vol. IV.:—Annales Monasterii de Oseneia, 1016–1347; Chronicon vulgo dictum Chronicon Thomæ Wykes, 1066–1289; Annales Prioratus de Wigornia, 1–1377. Vol. V. :—Index and Glossary. Edited by Henry Richards Luard, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, and Registrary of the University, Cambridge. 1864–1869.

The present collection of Monastic Annals embraces all the more important chronicles compiled in religious houses in England during the thirteenth century. These distinct works are ten in number. The extreme period which they embrace ranges from the year 1 to 1432, although they refer more especially to the reigns of John, Henry III., and Edward I. Some of these narratives have already appeared in print, but others are printed for the first time.

37. Magna Vita S. Hugonis Episcopi Lincolniensis. From Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and the Imperial Library, Paris. Edited by the Rev. James F. Dimock, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1864.

This work contains a number of very curious and interesting incidents, and, being the work of a contemporary, is very valuable, not only as a truthful biography of a celebrated ecclesiastic, but as the work of a man, who, from personal knowledge, gives notices of passing events, as well as of individuals who were then taking active part in public affairs. The author, in all probability, was Adam Abbot of Evesham. He was domestic chaplain and private confessor of Bishop Hugh, and in these capacities was admitted to the closest intimacy. Bishop Hugh was Prior of Witham for 11 years before he became Bishop of Lincoln. His consecration took place on the 21st September 1186 ; he died on the 16th of November 1200 ; and was canonized in 1220.

38. Chronicles and Memorials of the Reign of Richard the First. Vol. I. :—Itinerarium Peregrinorum et Gesta Regis Ricardi. Vol. II. :—Epistolæ Cantuarienses ; the Letters of the Prior and Convent of Christ Church, Canterbury ; 1187 to 1199. Edited by William Stubbs, M.A., Vicar of Navestock, Essex, and Lambeth Librarian. 1864–1865.

The authorship of the Chronicle in Vol. I., hitherto ascribed to Geoffrey Vinesauf, is now more correctly ascribed to Richard, Canon of the Holy Trinity of London. The narrative extends from 1187 to 1199 ; but its chief interest consists in the minute and authentic narrative which it furnishes of the exploits of Richard I., from his departure from England in December 1189 to his death in 1199. The author states in his prologue that he was an eye-witness of much that he records ; and various incidental circumstances which occur in the course of the narrative confirm this assertion.

The letters in Vol. II., written between 1187 and 1199, are of value as furnishing authentic materials for the history of the ecclesiastical condition of England during the reign of Richard I. They had their origin in a dispute which arose from the attempts of Baldwin and Hubert, archbishops of Canterbury, to found a college of secular canons, a project which gave great umbrage to the monks of Canterbury, who saw in it a design to supplant them in their function of metropolitan chapter. These letters are printed, for the first time, from a MS. belonging to the archiepiscopal library at Lambeth.

39. Recueil des Croniques et anchiennes Istories de la Grant Bretaigne a present nomme Engleterre, par Jehan de Waurin. Vol. I., Albina to 688. Vol. II., 1399–1422. Edited by William Hardy, Esq. F.S.A. 1864–1868.

40. A Collection of the Chronicles and ancient Histories of Great Britain, now called England, by John de Wavrin. Albina to 688. (Translation of the preceding Vol. I.) Edited and translated by William Hardy, Esq., F.S.A. 1864.

This curious chronicle extends from the fabulous period of history down to the return of Edward IV. to England in the year 1471, after the second deposition of Henry VI. The manuscript from which the text of the work is taken is preserved in the Imperial Library at Paris, and is believed to be the only complete and nearly contemporary copy in existence. The work, as originally bound, was comprised in six volumes, since rebound in morocco in 12 volumes, folio maximo, vellum, and is illustrated with exquisite miniatures, vignettes, and initial letters. It was written towards the end of the fifteenth century, having been expressly executed for Louis de Bruges, Seigneur de la Gruthuyse and Earl of Winchester, from whose cabinet it passed into the library of Louis XII. at Blois.

41. Polychronicon Ranulphi Higden, with Trevisa's Translation. Vols. I. and II. Edited by Churchill Babington, B.D., Senior Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Vol. III. Edited by the Rev. Joseph Rawson Lumby, M.A., late Fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge. 1865–1871.

This is one of the many mediæval chronicles which assume the character of a history of the world. It begins with the creation, and is brought down to the author's own time, the reign of Edward III. Prefixed to the historical portion, is a chapter devoted to geography, in which is given a description of every known land. To say that the Polychronicon was written in the fourteenth century is to say that it is not free from inaccuracies. It has, however, a value apart from its intrinsic merits. It enables us to form a very fair estimate of the knowledge of history and geography which well-informed readers of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries possessed, for it was then the standard work on general history.

The two English translations, which are printed with the original Latin, afford interesting illustrations of the gradual change of our language, for one was made in the fourteenth century, the other in the fifteenth. The differences between Trevisa's version and that of the unknown writer are often considerable.

42. Le Livere de Reis de Brittanie e Le Livere de Reis de Engletere. Edited by John Glover, M.A., Vicar of Brading, Isle of Wight, formerly Librarian of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1865.

These two treatises, though they cannot rank as independent narratives, are nevertheless valuable as careful abstracts of previous historians, especially "Le Livere de Reis de Engletere." Some various readings are given which are interesting to the philologist as instances of semi-Saxonized French.

It is supposed that Peter of Ickham must have been the author, but no certain conclusion on that point has been arrived at.

43. Chronica Monasterii de Melsa, ab Anno 1150 usque ad Annum 1406. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by Edward Augustus Bond, Esq., Assistant Keeper of the Manuscripts, and Egerton Librarian, British Museum. 1866–1868.

The Abbey of Meaux was a Cistercian house, and the work of its abbot is both curious and valuable. It is a faithful and often minute record of the establishment of a religious community, of its progress in forming an ample revenue, of its struggles to maintain its acquisitions, and of its relations to the governing institutions of the country. In addition to the private affairs of the monastery, some light is thrown upon the public events of the time, which are however kept distinct, and appear at the end of the history of each abbot's administration. The text has been printed from what is said to be the autograph of the original compiler, Thomas de Burton, the nineteenth abbot.

44. Matthæi Parisiensis Historia Anglorum, sive, ut vulgo dicitur, Historia Minor. Vols. I., II., and III. 1067–1253. Edited by Sir Frederic Madden, K.H., Keeper of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. 1866–1869.

The exact date at which this work was written is, according to the chronicler, 1250. The history is of considerable value as an illustration of the period during which the author lived, and contains a good summary of the events which followed the Conquest. This minor chronicle is, however, based on another work (also written by Matthew Paris) giving fuller details, which has been called the 'Historia Major.' The chronicle here published, nevertheless, gives some information not to be found in the greater history.

45. Liber Monasterii de Hyda: a Chronicle and Chartulary of Hyde Abbey, Winchester, 455–1023. Edited, from a Manuscript in the Library of the Earl of Macclesfield, by Edward Edwards, Esq. 1866.

The "Book of Hyde" is a compilation from much earlier sources, which are usually indicated with considerable care and precision. In many cases, however, the Hyde chronicler appears to correct, to qualify, or to amplify— either from tradition or from sources of information not now discoverable—the statements which, in substance, he adopts. He also mentions, and frequently quotes from, writers whose works are either entirely lost or at present known only by fragments.

There is to be found, in the "Book of Hyde," much information relating to the reign of King Alfred which is not known to exist elsewhere. The volume contains some curious specimens of Anglo-Saxon and Mediæval English.

46. Chronicon Scotorum: a Chronicle of Irish Affairs, from the Earliest Times to 1135; with a Supplement, containing the Events from 1141 to 1150. Edited, with a Translation, by William Maunsell Hennessy, Esq., M.R.I.A. 1866.

There is, in this volume, a legendary account of the peopling of Ireland and of the adventures which befell the various heroes who are said to have been connected with Irish history. The details are, however, very meagre both for this period and for the time when history becomes more authentic. The plan adopted in the chronicle gives the appearance of an accuracy to which the earlier portions of the work cannot have any claim. The succession of events is marked, year by year, from A.M. 1599 to A.D. 1150. The principal events narrated in the later portion of the work are the invasions of foreigners and the wars of the Irish among themselves. The text has been printed from a MS. preserved in the library of Trinity College, Dublin, written partly in Latin, partly in Irish.

47. The Chronicle of Pierre de Langtoft, in French Verse, from the earliest Period to the Death of Edward I. Vols. I. and II. Edited by Thomas Wright, Esq., M.A. 1866–1868.

It is probable that Pierre de Langtoft was a canon of Bridlington, in Yorkshire, and that he lived in the reign of Edward I., and during a portion of the reign of Edward II. This chronicle is divided into three parts; in the first is an abridgment of Geoffrey of Monmouth's "Historia Britonum," in the second, a history of the Anglo-Saxon and Norman kings, down to the death of Henry III., and in the third a history of the reign of Edward I. The principal object of the work was apparently to show the justice of Edward's Scottish wars. The language is singularly corrupt, and a curious specimen of the French of Yorkshire.

48. The War of the Gaedhil with the Gaill, or, The Invasions of Ireland by the Danes and other Norsemen. Edited, with a Translation, by James Henthorn Todd, D.D., Senior Fellow of Trinity College, and Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University, Dublin. 1867.

The work in its present form, in the editor's opinion, is a comparatively modern version of an undoubtedly ancient original. That it was compiled from contemporary materials has been proved by curious incidental evidence. It is stated in the account given of the battle of Clontarf that the full tide in Dublin Bay on the day of the battle (23 April 1014) coincided with sunrise; and that the returning tide in the evening aided considerably in the defeat of the Danes. The fact has been verified by astronomical calculations, and the inference is that the author of the chronicle, if not himself an eye-witness, must have derived his information from those who were eye-witnesses. The contents of the work are sufficiently described in its title. The story is told after the manner of the Scandinavian Sagas, with poems and fragments of poems introduced into the prose narrative.

49. Gesta Regis Henrici Secundi Benedicti Abbatis. The Chronicle of the Reigns of Henry II. and Richard I., 1169–1192 ; known under the name of Benedict of Peterborough. Vols. I. and II. Edited by William Stubbs, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, Oxford, and Lambeth Librarian. 1867.

This chronicle of the reigns of Henry II. and Richard I., known commonly under the name of Benedict of Peterborough, is one of the best existing specimens of a class of historical compositions of the first importance to the student.

50. Munimenta Academica, or, Documents illustrative of Academical Life and Studies at Oxford (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. Henry Anstey, M.A., Vicar of St. Wendron, Cornwall, and lately Vice-Principal of St. Mary Hall, Oxford. 1868.

This work will supply materials for a History of Academical Life and Studies in the University of Oxford during the 13th, 14th, and 15th centuries.

51. Chronica Magistri Rogeri de Houedene. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by William Stubbs, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 1868–1870.

This work has long been justly celebrated, but not thoroughly understood until Mr. Stubbs' edition. The earlier portion, extending from 732 to 1148, appears to be a copy of a compilation made in Northumbria about 1161, to which Hoveden added little. From 1148 to 1169—a very valuable portion of this work—the matter is derived from another source, to which Hoveden appears to have supplied little, and not always judiciously. From 1170 to 1192 is the portion which corresponds with the Chronicle known under the name of Benedict of Peterborough (see No. 49); but it is not a copy, being sometimes an abridgment, at others a paraphrase; occasionally the two works entirely agree, showing that both writers had access to the same materials, but dealt with them differently. From 1192 to 1201 may be said to be wholly Hoveden's work : it is extremely valuable, and an authority of the first importance.

52. Willelmi Malmesbiriensis Monachi de Gestis Pontificum Anglorum Libri Quinque. Edited, from William of Malmesbury's Autograph MS., by N. E. S. A. Hamilton, Esq., of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. 1870.

William of Malmesbury's "Gesta Pontificum" is the principal foundation of English Ecclesiastical Biography, down to the year 1122. The manuscript which has been followed in this Edition is supposed by Mr. Hamilton to be the author's autograph, containing his latest additions and amendments.

53. Historic and Municipal Documents of Ireland, from the Archives of the City of Dublin, &c. 1172–1320. Edited by John T. Gilbert, Esq., F.S.A., Secretary of the Public Record Office of Ireland. 1870.

A collection of original documents, elucidating mainly the history and condition of the municipal, middle, and trading classes under or in relation with the rule of England in Ireland,—a subject hitherto in almost total obscurity. Extending over the first hundred and fifty years of the Anglo-Norman settlement, the series includes charters, municipal laws and regulations, rolls or names of citizens and members of merchant-guilds, lists of commodities with their rates, correspondence, illustrations of relations between ecclesiastics and laity; together with many documents exhibiting the state of Ireland during the presence there of the Scots under Robert and Edward Bruce.

WORKS PUBLISHED IN PHOTOZINCOGRAPHY.

DOMESDAY BOOK, or the GREAT SURVEY OF ENGLAND OF WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, 1086; fac-simile of the Part relating to each county, separately (with a few exceptions of double counties). Photozincographed, by Her Majesty's Command, at the Ordnance Survey Office, Southampton, Colonel SIR HENRY JAMES, R.E., F.R.S., &c., Director. 35 Parts, imperial quarto and demy quarto (1861–1863) boards. Price 4*s.* 6*d.* to 1*l.* 1*s.* each Part, according to size; or, bound in 2 Vols., 18*l.*

This important and unique survey of the greater portion of England* is the oldest and most valuable record in the national archives. It was commenced about the year 1084 and finished in 1086. Its compilation was determined upon at Gloucester by William the Conqueror, in council, in order that he might know what was due to him, in the way of tax, from his subjects, and that each at the same time might know what he had to pay. It was compiled as much for their protection as for the benefit of the sovereign. The nobility and people had been grievously distressed at the time by the king bringing over large numbers of French and Bretons, and quartering them on his subjects, "each according to the measure of his land," for the purpose of resisting the invasion of Cnut, King of Denmark, which was apprehended. The commissioners appointed to make the survey were to inquire the name of each place; who held it in the time of King Edward the Confessor; the present possessor; how many hides were in the manor; how many ploughs were in demesne; how many homagers; how many villeins; how many cottars; how many serving men; how many free tenants; how many tenants in soccage; how much wood, meadow, and pasture; the number of mills and fish-ponds; what had been added or taken away from the place; what was the gross value in the time of Edward the Confessor; the present value; and how much each free-man or soc-man had, and whether any advance could be made in the value. Thus could be ascertained who held the estate in the time of King Edward; who then held it; its value in the time of the late king; and its value as it stood at the formation of the survey. So minute was the survey, that the writer of the contemporary portion of the Saxon Chronicle records, with some asperity—"So very narrowly he caused it to be traced out, that there was not a single hide, nor one virgate of land, nor even, it is shame to tell, though it seemed to him no shame to do, an ox, nor a cow, nor a swine was left, that was not set down."

Domesday Survey is in two parts or volumes. The first, in folio, contains the counties of Bedford, Berks, Bucks, Cambridge, Chester and Lancaster, Cornwall, Derby, Devon, Dorset, Gloucester, Hants, Hereford, Herts, Huntingdon, Kent, Leicester and Rutland, Lincoln, Middlesex, Northampton, Nottingham, Oxford, Salop, Somerset, Stafford, Surrey, Sussex, Warwick, Wilts, Worcester, and York. The second volume, in quarto, contains the counties of Essex, Norfolk, and Suffolk.

Domesday Book was printed verbatim et literatim during the last century, in consequence of an address of the House of Lords to King George III. in 1767. It was not, however, commenced until 1773, and was completed early in 1783. In 1860, Her Majesty's Government, with the concurrence of the Master of the Rolls, determined to apply the art of photozincography to the production of a fac-simile of Domesday Book, under the superintendence of Colonel Sir Henry James, R.E., director of the Ordnance Survey, Southampton. The fac-simile was completed in 1863.

*For some reason left unexplained, many parts were left unsurveyed; Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Durham, are not described in the survey; nor does Lancashire appear under its proper name; but Furness, and the northern part of Lancashire, as well as the south of Westmoreland, with a part of Cumberland, are included within the West Riding of Yorkshire. That part of Lancashire which lies between the Ribble and Mersey, and which at the time of the survey comprehended 688 manors, is joined to Cheshire. Part of Rutland is described in the counties of Northampton and Lincoln.

FAC-SIMILES of NATIONAL MANUSCRIPTS, from WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR to QUEEN ANNE, selected under the direction of the Master of the Rolls, and Photozincographed, by Command of Her Majesty, by Colonel SIR HENRY JAMES, R.E., Director of the Ordnance Survey. Price, each Part, double foolscap folio, with translations and notes, 1*l.* 1*s.*

Part I. (William the Conqueror to Henry VII.). 1865.
Part II. (Henry VIII. and Edward VI.). 1866.
Part III. (Mary and Elizabeth). 1867
Part IV. (James I. to Anne). 1868.

The first Part extends from William the Conqueror to Henry VII., and contains autographs of the kings of England, as well as of many other illustrious personages famous in history, and some interesting charters, letters patent, and state papers. The second Part, for the reigns of Henry VIII. and Edward VI., consists principally of holograph letters and autographs of kings, princes, statesmen, and other persons of great historical interest, who lived during those reigns. The third Part contains similar documents for the reigns of Mary and Elizabeth, including a signed bill of Lady Jane Grey. The fourth Part concludes the series, and comprises a number of documents taken from the originals belonging to the Constable of the Tower of London ; also several records illustrative of the Gunpowder Plot, and a woodcut containing portraits of Mary Queen of Scots and James VI., circulated by their adherents in England, 1580-3.
